

California Mineral Education Foundation

Earth Science Conference for Teachers

The California Mineral Education Foundation (CMEF) is hosting a conference that offers information about California's rocks and minerals. This conference is standards based and is designed to provide lesson plans, hands-on workshops, classroom materials and a tour for K-12 Teachers. Workshops will be divided into appropriate grade categories.

CMEF Teacher Conference
June 23, 2011 (8AM-4:30PM)
Cache Creek Conservancy Nature Preserve
34199 County Road 20, Woodland, CA

Who Should Attend: All K-12 teachers who need help meeting state standards in earth science. Subject matter is applicable and informative for all levels, from the novice to the science "expert." All classroom activities, lesson plans, materials, videos and mine tour experiences have been geared for specific standards and are ready for use in the classroom.

Purpose: To provide California teachers with information and practical applications that will be of assistance in the teaching of earth science, and in particular, the important role minerals play in our daily lives.

Instructors and Lecturers: University professors, accredited California Earth Science teachers and geologists.

Continuing Education Credit: a certificate of 8 hours of continuing education will be provided. Check with your district office to be sure this meets your local requirements.

University Credit: One unit of credit (fall semester 2011) is available through California State University, Sacramento. Contact the CMEF office for further information about cost and procedure for applying for credit.

Registration: Since many components of the conference are donated, your total cost is only $75.

Scholarships Available: Some scholarship funds are available. Please contact the CMEF office if you are interested in applying for a scholarship.
